

Hosting service? Aren't you...

Yes, we are an advertising agency. We do not have servers, channels and technology that allows us to host your video. Still, we work with your video and have to provide delivery methods for large amounts of video. We have to make sure that your video is always quickly available for you in the best possible quality. To use your video for advertising online we use our partners - experts in digitalizing analog video, hosting solutions, content delivery networks.

We try not to get tied down with a single technological provider to provide the most flexible solutions and opportunities for our clients.

Video hosting is a common term for what could be a wide array of complex video solutions.

- view your video from anywhere in the world securely
- publish your video for preview and handle the heavy incoming traffic
- broadcast a video stream
- distribute video upload by allowing people to download it
- provide a way for people to upload content

And many more, but all these solutions have technological names and specifications, and if we were a technological provider, we would definitely describe all of them here.

We are an advertising agency, therefore all this is to, same as to you - video hosting. We find the best solutions, work with a number of providers to receive the maximum results, assurance, speed and security - with minimum expenses, just like the rest of us.

What's so "advanced" in it?

We are driven by innovation, we develop interesting and modern formats for our clients and ourselves. We find solve online video problems or try to find interesting solutions.
